One of my friends, Mr. Chen owns a company. His daughter worked part-time in his office as an assistant while she attended graduate school. One morning, a call came in for her. "She's not in yet." My friend said. "Can I take a message?"

"Thank you! I'll call her back later," the woman said.

At 11 o'clock, she tried again, and he reported that Miss Chen had gone to lunch. The last call came in at 3:30. "Sorry, she's left for the day. Is there anything I can help you with?"

"Yes," the caller said. "How can I get a job with you?"

Ladies and gentlemen, welcome to the "Public Speaking" class. I am Dr. Johnson, your instructor of this class. In this class, you'll learn to overcome stage fright, organize meaningful content, make outlines for speeches, and work with others as a team in a group presentation.

Before the class begins, I would like to tell you about the requirements of this class. There will be a written midterm exam. The purpose of this exam is to measure your knowledge background about the theories of Public Speaking from the textbook which worth 30% of your grades. The final exam worth another 30% which would be an oral presentation on stage. Each one of you will have at least two on stage presentations over the semester. And your attendance will worth 20% of your scores. Four points will be deducted from your grades for each absence. There is a one-hour lab class beyond the exercises in class. All students should speak English only in the lab which will build up your oral skills from actual using the language. With fluent English ability, proper body language, and meaningful content, I have full confidence that you all will be great speakers in the future. Is there any question?
